

Professor Paul Kerswill

University of York

Prof. Paul Kerswill is a professor of sociolinguistics at the University of York (UK) and fellow of The British Academy. His research focuses on language variation and change especially in the context of dialect contact that arises through migration and mobility in Europe and Sub-Saharan Africa. He has been the principal investigator on several major research projects including recent work on the nature, development, and media representation of Multicultural London English.

Department of Language Studies at UTM is delighted to welcome guest lecturer Professor Paul Kerswill, and invites you to join us for his lecture:

Demography in the formation of Multicultural London English: the Jamaican component

Wednesday, May 29, 2019

11:00 a.m.-12:30 p.m.

University of Toronto Mississauga
New North Building, room 3180

coffee and light refreshments will be provided